

Dear reader,

Let it be known that Mr. John Kenneth Press is an excellent teacher, employee and person. This conclusion has been reached after nearly six months of employing him as a teacher of English as a foreign language.

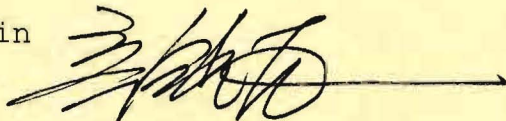

Mr. Press first started working for our school on part-time probationary status on September 13th, 1995. His thorough lesson planning, professional attitude and popularity convinced us to offer him a full-time contracted position starting that October.

Since then he has maintained his exemplary traits. It is our school policy that classes rotate teachers every two months. After two and a half months with the class he began in September they protested so adamantly about losing him as a teacher we, with his consent, didn't rotate him. Two months later the same thing happened. He taught that class for five and a half months and the students were still sad about losing him.

His professional attitude and popularity extend beyond the classroom. For two months John taught five different levels simultaneously and did an excellent job with each. He never complained about his 6am till 9:30pm schedule or 7 day a week schedule. These both made me very happy. And, at no charge, he privately taught a student about Judaism nearly daily for two months. He said he was doing it because one learns through teaching and because the student was a customer of our school. These things are typical of his character.

It is with urging that I recommend Mr. Press to you. We were all very sorry when his injury forced him to stop teaching for us after only 7 and a half months. We're sure whoever he teaches for after us will be very happy with him.
